

Romy Terkel, M.Ed., M.A.
Personal Biographer

Romy Terkel's passion for hearing people's life stories led her to pursue her graduate studies at the University of British Columbia, where she completed two Master's degrees in psychology. She subsequently worked in the field for over 15 years, honing her skills in interviewing, active listening, and writing.

At the same time, she built a "side hustle," saving people's life stories in the form of Legacy Books — a passion fueled by her family's loss of important history and a desire to protect others from the same fate. She eventually founded Fingerprint Legacies to pursue her dream full time.

She has worked with more than thirty families and businesses, capturing their histories, values, and hard-won lessons so their legacies carry meaning across generations. She is the author of The Living Legacy Playbook: Unlocking the Stories That Give Wealth Meaning, a structured approach to gathering stories that facilitates communication and strengthens multigenerational connections. Preserving legacies has become her life's work. For more information, please visit: www.fingerprintlegacies.com
